Perplexity Labs Inbox ✕

Rudi Farkas <rudi.farkas@gmail.com>

to me

10:48 AM (1 hour ago)

Perplexity Labs

https://labs.perplexity.ai/

Yes, it is possible to copy the entire thread as Markdown. Here's how you can do it:

1. Select the Text: Highlight the entire conversation by selecting all the text from the beginning of our discussion up until now.

2. Copy to Clipboard: Right-click (or control-click on macOS) and select "Copy" or use the keyboard shortcut `Ctrl+C` (Windows) or `Cmd+C` (macOS) to copy the selected text.

3. Paste into Markdown Editor: Open a Markdown editor or any text editor that supports Markdown formatting. You can then paste the copied text into this editor.

4. Format as Needed: If necessary, you can format the text further using Markdown syntax. For example, you might want to add headers (`# Heading`) or bullet points (`* Bullet point`). You can also use inline formatting like bold (`Bold text`) or italics (`Italic text`).

5. Save Your Markdown File: Once you're satisfied with the formatting, save your file with an `.md` extension (e.g., `conversation.md`). This will allow you to easily read and edit your conversation in Markdown format.

Here's an example of how you might format our conversation in Markdown:

```markdown
Conversation Thread

Introduction
- Topic: Discussion about Fish shell, Xonsh, and passkeys.
- Date: [Insert Date]

Fish Shell
- Installation: To install Fish on macOS using Homebrew, run:
```bash
```